I object in the strongest of terms to the very idea that anyone is allowed to "inject" a voicemail without my ability to see them calling first. I block spam calls from those attempting to sell me products I have not asked for. Clearly, obviously and heinously, this gets around users' ability to control their own work environment. It violates core and fundamental trust in our government to protect us, U.S. citizens.

By siding with Corporations who would go to any extent to violate our ability to control our own time to lead productive lives, if this passes, the FCC will have violated my faith in government.

Anyone supporting this proposal does not belong at the FCC. The fact that you'd even consider this shows just how far and deep your organization has fallen.
